Editor O'Brien's Testimony Before the Commission - Boss Miners Breaking Faith With the Miners-Italy and Germany to Sign a Compact-Many Lives Lost in the Bohemia

Floods.

London, May 22.—Mr. William O'Brien testifled before the Parnell commission yesterday. The court room was crowded and the witness was listened to with great attention. Owing to Mr. O'Brien's condition, the result of his long imprisonment, he was allowed to remain seated. In a weak voice, which it was difficult to hear beyond the counsel's table, the witness gave a detailed account of agrarian outrages perpetrated in County Tipperary prior to the formation of the National league in that district. The league, said the witness, after it was established, prevented a wholesale famine and a fearful war in the west of Ireland in 1870. The witness declared that no murders had been committed in branch there. Mr. O'Brien said that he fully approved of the practice of boycotting and declared that it had had the effect of preventing crime. Mr. Reid read an article from Mr. O'Brien's paper, United and act, when the occupants of the front Ireland, denouncing the Phoenix park murders. Mr. O'Brien said that the tain. His appearance was the occasion government should pursue a policy of conciliation and thus obtain the sym-pathies of the people. The government in 1883 suppressed United Ireland because he (the witness) had charged the ministry with having manufactured crimes, a charge he was prepared to prove. Mr. O'Brien then proceeded to detail the alleged manufactured outrages, but Sir Richard Webster objected and the court sustained his objection.

Reid Makes His Bow.

Paris, May 22.—President Carnot yesterday gave an audience to Mr. Whitelaw Reid, the American minister, who presented his credentials. In his remarks Mr. Reid assured President Carnot that he would endeavor to maintain and stimulate the esteem which President Harrison and the whole American people held for France. "It is my good fortune," said Mr. Reid, "to represent America here when France is celebrating a centenary as important as the centenary lately celebrated in America. We do not forget that you helped in the success of our revolution. This increases our interest in the magnificent display of the arts of peace with which you nobly crown your centenary. My instructions inform me that there does not exist the shadow of difference between France and the United States capable of obscuring the century old friendship of the two republies, which, I hope, will always endure."

President Carnot, replying to Mr. Reid, said that there existed between France and the United States traditions which imparted relations of an especially agreeable character. The coincidence of the celebration of the centenaries of the in-There are some twenty negroes await- auguration of Washington and the ing trial for murder in the first degree in revolution which gave birth to republicanism in France, both occurring in 1889, added another link to those relations. In conclusion M. Carnot said: "Mr. Reid, you will find from the French government and from all Frenchmen a cordial greeting. Pursuing the common idea of democratic progress and social justice the two nations cannot cease to understand one another. On grounds of international relations your task is therefore an easy one. Monsieur Minister, you are welcome among us.' Not Living Up to the Agreement.

A Military Convention.

LONDON, May 22.—The Tageblatt, referring to King Humbert's visit, declares that a military convention between Germany and Italy will be signed by the king and kaiser during the former's stay in Berlin with a view to the possibility of the occurrence of war between one of the signatory parties and France. In connection with this statement it is significant that several Italian military officers of high rank have arrived in Berlin incognito presumably to discuss the details of the convention.

₹atal Floods in Bohemia.

VIENNA, May 22.—Forty-five deaths are thus far reported to have occurred through the floods in Bohemia, and it is believed that the total loss of life will greatly exceed the highest estimates yet made. The details of the floods in Bohemia now coming in confirm the worst reports hitherto arrived. The country in the vicinity of Pilsen is one vast lake and the crops are hopelessly ruined Thousands of persons are thus reduced to the verge of starvation and many must die if help is not immediately forthcoming.

England to Have a Hand in It.

London, May 29.—The Post's Berlin correspondent says that the chief points of the final protocol of the Samoan conference are: First, that the government of Samoa will be arranged upon a triparte basis, England being accorded a position similar to that of arbitrator. The second point of importance is that dealing with a land commission. England will have a large influence in the appointment of a supreme judicial functionary.

Memorial to the Government.

LONDON, May 22.-A meeting of Unionist peers and members of the house of commons, held last night, adopted a memorial to the government requesting the abolition of the office of viceroy of Ireland and the transfer of the functions of that office to a secretary of state. The memorial also asks that a royal residence be maintained in Dublin.

The Persian king will remain three days at the winter palace in St. Petersburg and proceed thence to Paris.

NOT A FLATTERING SUCCESS.

A Play Received by a Chicago Audience in Anything But a Friendly Manner.

CHICAGO, May 22.-When Marie Anthony, in the person of Kyrle Bellew, assisted Queen Cleopatra, personified by Mrs. James Brown Potter, to alight from the deck of the royal barge to the stage of McVicker's theatre to-night, onethird of the occupants on the ground floor and nearly all those in the balcony and gallery hissed to their hearts content. These expressions of disappropation were answered by clapping of hands and stamping of feet by those who occupied the twelve boxes and the front rows of the parquetto. When the applause had died away the hissing was continued, and a third time were the marks of disapprobation and greeting renewed. Then the play was allowed to proceed without further interruption. The occu-pants of the boxes included Cyrus Mc-Cormick and party, Mrs. II. O. Stone, the Farwell family (Senator Farwell excented), Reginal DeKoven and Mrs. De-Koven, nee Miss Farwell, Hobart Taylor and party, and others of the citie of Chicago society. These as well as the occupants of the first four rows of the parquette were the guests of W. E. Stokes, brother of Ed Stokes of the Hoffman house of New York, who had tendered invitations to the performance to over 200 prominent Chicagoans. After the first outburst the play was allowed to proceed without demonstration until the close of the terrace scene in the secfor mingled cheers and hisses, and he precipitatedly retired. The expected demonstration on the part of the Chicago club to which Henry Abbey referred in his interview of last night in New York failed to materialize. There were more hisses, however, than have been heard in all the Chicago theatres combined for many years.

A STEAMER GOES DOWN.

Collision Between the Steamers German Emperor and Beresford.

LONDON, May 22.—The British steame. German Emperor, from London to Bilboa, ran into the British steamer Beresford, from Hartlepool for Bombay, at 2 o'clock on Tuesday morning, while the latter was lying at anchor on the Goodwin sands. The German Emperor sank in-stantly. Boats were launched from the Beresford and succeeded in rescuing three persons from the German Emperor. The Beresford's bows were stove in. She disappeared in the fog and for a while her fate was unknown, but it is now learned that she is proceeding to Gravesend, where she will effect temporary repairs. Nine persons on board the German Emperor took to a small boat and have landed at Dover.

LATER.—The survivors who landed at Dover from the loss steamer German Emperor gave exaggerated reports concerning the loss of life by the collision. It is now ascertained that the loss of life was not as great as was first reported. The Beresford has arrived at Gravesend. She has on board twenty-two of her own crew and twelve of the crew of the German Emperor.

Odd Fellows in Session.

YORK, Pa., May 22-At the meeting of the Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows of Pennsylvania the financial committee reported receipts of $3,347,472. The report of the Daughters of Rebekah shows a membership of 5,110, an increase of 1,600 since the last report; that nearly $6.000 had been expended, and that 84 lodges had been instituted. The report of the subordinate lodges showed 88,490 members, an increase of 3.680; that seven lodges surrendered their charters; that in all forms of relief $470,379.80 had been expended; that the working expenses of the lodges were $250,795.49, and the average cost per member for relief and working expenses was $3.33. that the relief granted amounted to $1,228.70 per day; during the past twentyone years the lodges in Pennsylvania have paid for the relief of distress $7,--608,534.12 and with the addition of $1,-102,967.96 paid by the encampment.

To Make a Fortune.

RALEIGH, N. C., May 22.—One of the most extraordinary cases on record was instituted in the superior court here lest evening by W. T. Hodge, a citizen of this county. It seems that about twenty years ago a statute was enacted requiring all railroads operating in the state to make annual reports of business to the governor of the state, and a failure to make such reports made the railroads liable to a penalty of $500, which should go to any citizen who would sue for it. The statute has never been observed by the railroads, and Hodge instituted suit last evening against forty railroads to get the penalty. If successful he will gain an aggregate amount of $20,000.

The Pittsburg Festival.

PITTSBURG. May 22.—Despite the inclemency of the weather and the interior atmosphere that was chilly and searching as a January wind, fully 9,000 people turned out last night to honor the inauguration of the new music hall and the may festival. The attendance, excepting in the orchestra chairs, was satisfactorily large. The boxes were all filled, largely by proxy (their owners for the most part preferring to remain away the first night). The balconies and galleries were all well tenanted, there being few chairs left in either of them. The opening night was a success in every particular, and the performers received an ovation.

Murdered by a Coward.

Paris, Tex., May 22.-J. T. Ownby, a lawyer, and Richard Moore, a young man, fought a duel at short range in Ownby's office on Tuesday without doing much damage. Moore was arrested and, while going to court for a preliminavy examination, he was shot and killed by Ownby. The murder was of a cowardly character. Ownby stationed himself at a courtroom window, and, when Moore appeared in charge of officers, he riddled his body with buckshot. Moore's brother threatens to kill Ownby on sight.

The May festival will be opened in Pittsburg on Tuesday. Governor Beaver is expected to be present; as are also the governors of West Virginia; Maryland and Ohio.

THE PRESBYTERIANS.

NEW YORK ASSEMBLY CONTINUES THE DEBATE ON RESOLUTIONS.

The Committee on Home Missions Desire the Sum of $875,000-The Chief Business Transacted by the Southern Assembly Was the Report of the Committee on Co-Operation Between the Northern and Southern Assemblies.

NEW YORK, May 22.—The Presbyterian

general assembly continues in session. The general order of the day, the consideration of the fourth resolution offered by the special committee of the board of freedmen, was taken up. It was this report that caused a controversy on Friday between Rev. Drs. Dickey and Hamlin. An attempt to effect a compromise between the two factions was begun. Rev. Dr. Crosby moved to strike out a portion of the resolution which he considered would arrange matters to the satisfaction of all. The portion to be stricken out was that relating to the confidence the assembly placed in the ability of the board of freedmen. This was the objectionable portion.

Rev. Dr. Ketchum offered a substitute for Dr. Crosby's motion, but the hour having arrived for the home mission report the debate was brought to an end.

Rev. Dr. Nichols, chairman of the committee on home missions, then read his report. The report recommended that for the ensuing year the sum of $875,000 be authorized for the use of home missions. This large amount is considered necessary because of the rapid rate at which the western and northwestern portions of the country are being settled and for work among the white and black population of the south. The Women's Home Mission, unaided and alone, raised the sum of $361,000 during the year. The report of the committee on the whole was a highly satisfactory one, and was heartily applauded.

Mr. Thomas Kane of Chicago gave the assembly a few hints in relation to obtaining donations for the home missions. His advice was to write profuse letters of thanks to all who gave.

The debate on the report of the board of home missions was resumed and participated in by Mr. Robert T. Simms, Rev. John Menard, Rev. Edgar L. Williams of Illinois, and Rev. Dr. Robert N. Adams, Minnesota, who spoke of the bad condition of affairs in the Black Hills. Then the debate was closed and the resolutions as recommended by the committee were adopted. The report of the committee on emigrant population was adopted after an unsuccessful effort on the part of Dr. Mamlin and others to embody a provisfion that foreign languages ought not to be taught in the schools. The report of the committee on board of aid for colleges and academies, recomless the Bible forms part of its curriculum, was adopted. The fourth resolution of the report of the board on freedmen was again taken up. Dr. Ketchum of Plainfield. N. J., niade a report charging the board with mismanagement and asking for a special committee to investigate the subject and report next year. Pending debate the mending that no institution be aided un-meeting adjourned. The Southern Assembly.

Chattanooga, May 22.—The chief business of the Presbyterian assembly was the report of the committee on cooperation between the northern and southern assemblies. The report says: "The report was taken up in its various divisions and the discussion of all points involved therein was free and unrestrained. After full consideration, the committee recommend to the assembly the adoption of the report as a whole. The committee stood 15 to 7 in favor of the report. The committee on the state of the church submitted a report recommending more careful observance of family worship and greatly deploring the neglect in this regard; recommending closer regard for the evangelization of the negro and urging that much good could be accomplished if white ministers would more actively work in the field. A falling off in church attendance in the larger cities at night is reported and a suggestion made that perhaps it would be well to consider the abolition of night sessions and hold instead afternoon meetings for mission work. This suggestion, however, was stricken out. Rev. Alonzo P. Peak of the Dutch Reformed church, presented the greetings of his church and the assembly accepted them and responded with resolutions of regard. The committee report on the case of the Presbytery of Hecklenburg versus the synod of North Carolina sustained the synod.

The afternoon session was devoted to discussion of the celebrated Woodrow case, the point in the discussion being whether the decision of the assembly in the matter a year ago was general and its application general, or referred only to that particular case. T. C. Whaling and Dr. J. B. Adger delivered addresses, arguing that the decision was special in its application, while Dr. J. L. Girardeau took opposite grounds. The discussion will be continued to-morrow. At the night session reports were received from returned missionaries as to the work in their fields.

Ground to Death in the Power House.

PITTSBURG, May 22.—A man named Kountz was killed yesterday morning by being caught in the machinery at the power house of the St. Clair incline, on Twenty-second street, Southside. was engaged in oiling the machinery when his arm was caught, dragging him between the immense wheels, and death resulted almost instantly. The deceased was a widower and leaves one child.

New Natural Gas Company.

SPRINGFIELD, O., May 22.-Papers were sent to Columbus for the incorporation of the Springfield Natural Gas company. The incorporators are Gen. A. S. Bushnell, A. S. Kelly, P. J. Cale, T. W. Ludlow and John Foos. The capital stock is $10,000, which it is proposed to increase to $60,000. Gas will be piped from the Mercer county, Pa.,

HORRIBLE DISCLOSURES.

Continuation of the Chicago Insane Asylum Investigation. Chicago, May 22.-More horrible disclosures were made at the insane asylum investigation yesterday. Mrs. J. J. Wolverton of 59 Myrtle street, was the first witness. Her daughter, Amelia Linzell, was sent there in Nov., 1885, and the witness frequently went out to see her until the time of her release. The February following her daughter's commitment to the asylum Mrs. Wolverton found her in a horrible condition. She was in a filthy condition in a filthy ward. She was covered with vermin and had great sores all over her head, while one of her toes was said to have been frozen. James Watsik, a boilermaker, testified that when he went to see his wife at the asylum on June 9, 1888, he was shown a baby whom the attendants said was Mrs. Watsik's infant, although witness had not been allowed to see his wife for two years previous to that time. Nelson Salterfield testified that while in the hospital at the asylum in 1885 he had frequently seen both male and female patients kicked and beaten. The investigation proceeds to-day.

AN EDUCATED COLORED MAN BOUND HAND AND FOOT

By Seven Colored Fiends, Who Then Proceed to Outrage His Wife and 10-Year-Old Daughter - A Posse of Whites Capture the Villains and Lodge Them in Jall-The Victims in a Precarious

CULPEPPER COURT HOUSE, Va., May 23.—Saven negroes near Richardsville, this county, went to the residence of a highly respected and educated colored man last Saturday and bound him hand and foot. They then proceeded to outrage his wife. After partaking of whisky they had brought they discovered the little 10-year-old daughter in the second story of the house, to which she had fled. They brought her down stairs and accomplished their purpose. They left the old man bound and his wife and child in a most pitiful condition, threatened to burn the house and cut out the tongues of their victims if they divulged the perpetrators of the crime. The helpless victims were soon found by a passing friend and the alarm was given. A posse of whites and blacks started in pursuit and captured the villains near the scene of the assault. They were taken to the county jail where they are guarded by a strong force. An attempt was made Saturday night to break the jail and lynch them, but guards frightened the party off. The wife is in a critical condition. She may recover, but the little child is dying. She may The militia is asked for, as it is hourly expected that another attempt will be made to sorce the jail and lynch them.

A SECOND TRIAL UNNECESSARY. A Man Accused of Killing His Uncle and

Out on Bail Takes His Own Life. BALTIMORE, May 22.—The Sun's special from Gloucester C. H., Va., says Joshua F. Ross, a well-known lawyer and Republican politician, who was on bail awaiting a second trial on the charge of killing his uncle, George Hughes, shot himself about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon and is now dying. He went up to A. C. Rigney's room in the hotel about 4:45. After talking with Rigney a few moments he took a pistol from his pocket and said: "Old friend, who shall go first, you or I?" Rigney thought it all a joke and told him to kill either he choose. Rigney lit a cigarette while they talked and Ross sat in a chair near the head of the bed. Ross then put the pistol to his own head, fired and fell to the floor. Dr. William F. Jones pronounced the wound fatal. Few people heard the report of the pistol and none knew anything was wrong until Rigney told what had happened. Ross is said to have been drinking heavily for some days. He was up late the night previous and was very melancholy. Ross killed his uncle, George Hughes, last fall on the complaint of his (Ross') wife that Hughes had made indecent proposals to her. He was tried and convicted in April just passed, and appealed for and was granted a new trial, which was to

THE UNITED STATES TREASURER'S | them out for the necessities of life. MUCH SOUGHT AUTOGRAPH.

A Billion and a Half of "Spinners"-J. N. Buston's Will Soon Adorn Unch Sam's Interesting Antographs.

WASHINGTON, May 16,-16 a few days the plate printing presses of Uncle Sum's big money mill will begin grinding out erisp, beautiful bank notes and silver certificates with a new name signed to them. J. N. Husten, the new trensurer of the United States, will soon take possession of the office to which he has been appointed by the president, and then his name will be sent thundering down the ages by means of the signing of his autograph to all the paper money used by the people of this country. Immediately Mr. Huston's autograph will become one of the most valuable and popular known to the common people. It is for his name, signed at the lower right hand corner of small pieces of paper, that 65,000,000 of human beings will do more or less struggling, make many sacrifices, and often will they mourn because they get it not. To accommodate all the people who want his autograph Mr. Huston will be compelled to sign his name a great many times a day, and, work as industriously as he may, the chances are that even then some poor mortals will be disappointed, while others will get much more than their share. This is not Mr. happier if they could make enough in the pocket of every man who owned money so that no one need go without. ; Probably if they were to print a thousand times as much money as they do print, a few men would succeed in hogging the major share and in leaving but a small portion to be divided among a great army millions of the less fortunate. If you should be lucky enough to get hold of a few of Mr. Huston's autographs and to retain them long enough to make a study of their appearance, do not ituagine that Mr. Huston made them in the good old way, with pen and ink Mr. Huston is an accomplished penman and an industrious sert of person, but if he were to set out to sign with pen and ink all the money which Uncle Sam puts in circulation, it would take him about ten hou, sa day and doing nothing else to sign the new notes that go out in a single year. If we had to wait on Mr Huston's pen, nimble though it is, in about six weeks there would be very litthe paper currency in the country, excent a lot of old Lills, so worn and rotten as to be barely able to hold together, and such growling about the scarcity of money as was never before heard of.

There was a time when greenbacks was! That was at the beginning of the late war, when the specie had run out and something had to be provided for payment of the soldiers and contractors who were carrying on the gigantic operations of civil hostilities. As everybody knows, the greenback was the device hit upon, and sixty millions of dollars of the old "demand notes," were issued as fast as they were wanted. These notes were signed by several men, authorized to do so as the representatives of the treasurer of the United States and the register of the treasury. For a months they did nothing else. Occasionally when the needs of the government rose to nearly a million dollars a day they had to work twenty hours out of twenty-four, in order that there might be funds to pay the men who were fighting the battles and the commissaries who were feeding them. One of the men who signed these notes,

J. W. Whelpley, still lives and works in the same office he then occupied, though now as assistant treasurer of the United States. He could sign up to five thousand notes a day, and by working late into the night could work off as many as seven thousand. But there was on the scriveners' force a man named Evans-John Evans-who was the mainstay of the soldier as pay day approached. Evans was a phenomenal penman, and when the authorities got into tight places, in the calls made on them for ready cash, as they frequently did, they would go to Evans and ask him to put on steam. When pushed to it Evans could sign 15,000 notes in twenty-four hours, and get rest enough to enable him to start in again the following day. But in order to de this he abbreviated his aiready short name to "J. Evans," and wrote that with a mere dash of his pen, leaving an autograph which a stranger could never decipher, and yet one which nobody could counterfeit. It is a curious fact that although $60,000,000 of these notes were usued and put into circulation, many millions of them to solbeen redeemed at the freasury, showing that not a great deal of currency was lost or destroyed even in those troublous

Of this $56,000 outstanding, a few hundreas dribble into the redemption bureau every year-old bills which some soldier was paid off with down in Dixie, and which he has hoarded till this day for the sake of their associations. The money counters in the redemption bureau say they occasionally get hold of old "demand notes" of the issue of 1861, and greenbacks of 1862 and 1863, which are discolored by blood, but otherwise almost like new. These notes, say the clerks, were sewn in the lining of the uniform of some soldier who was wounded, and who, on recovering, brought the blood teria than the subsequent ones.

BILLIONS OF SIGNATURES, stained greenbacks home as souvenirs of FASHION'S LATE DECREE. his part in the war, carefully preserving them till compelled by adversity to pay

As the war processed the needs of the government in the way of paper currency became so enermous that even the nimble Evans and his co-workers were unable to move their pens rapidly enough Money-It Must Be Done by Muchinery, to keep up with the demand for greenbacks, and the names of the treasurer and register were, then printed upon the I face of the bills. Mr. Huston is the seventh man to gave the honor of having his name printed upon the paper money of the country as the responsible issuing officer-the man deputed by the government to sign in its name its millions upon millions of promissory notes. The first of the seven was F. E. Spinner, generally known as "Old Spinner," who, as treasurer through the war, and up to 1875, had the pleasure of seeing his name go upon the most extensive issue of paper money ever made by a government in a similar time. No fewer than one billion and five hundred millions of dollars of money went into circulation in fourteen years, bearing the famous signature of "Old Spinner"—that signature which for many years was one of the standing jokes of the country.

"Old Spinner," who was one of the most faithful officials the government ever had, still lives in Florida, where it is said he scrawls his famous autograph in the sand and with it frightens away the festive alligators. Yet, even wealth is not immortal, and riches take wings and fly away, for of that vast sum of "Spinner money" only $35,000,000 remain "outstanding" at this day-proba-Huston's fault, nor Uncle Sam's, for bly not more than one-half of it in exthese worthy gentlemen would be much istence. Soon Spinner's signature, once a dollar, or even a ten cent "shinplaster," will have become a curiosity.

Treasury officials say the average life of a bank note of the denomination of one dollar or two dollars is only three years. Though for a dollar note many a poor wretch must work from morning till night, it is after all but a frail piece of paper, and quickly becomes worn and ragged from uso as it goes on its journey thirty years, working with all his might of good or evil through the world. A five dollar note will last five times as long as a dollar note, and a ten dollar

note twice as long as a five dollar. Over at the money mill, as the bureau of printing and engraving is known, is a huge vault filled with the steel plates were signed by a pen, and what a task it on which something like four billions of dollars of money has been printed. The plates now in use are the silver certificates, the national bank notes, the interest checks and a few other minor forms of collateral. Some of these plates cost a thousand dollars apiece, but every one James W. Kyall

of them must have the new treasurers name on it before it can be used in the printing of a single dollar after he takes office. Luckily it is not necessary to destroy the old plates and make new ones.

Shortly after the appointment of Mr. Huston by the president the chief of the money mill sent to him for his autograph. "Be careful about it," said the chief, "for it is the signature that will go on millions and millions of money. Make it to suit you, so that it can be left undisturbed as long as you remain in the office." The new treasurer sat up nights with his autograph making. Though a banker and a business man who has long known the value of an autograph, never before did Mr. Huston so fully understand how much the simple signing of a name might mean. He wanted this name neatly signed, plainly signed, with a handwriting that should indicate character, strength, facility of execution, gracefulness. Mr. Huston didn't keep count of the number of times he wrote his name before he found an autograph which in his modest estimation was fit to certify to the genuineness of five hundred millions of dollars, but he will not deny that in his two or three days of practice he covered a couple of quires of paper. When the autograph was finally received at the money mill the skilled workmen there made short shift of their part of the task of making ready for the issue of new money. Within a few days bright and pretty 'Huston money" will be in circulation. In a few months the country will be flooded with it. If you have a friend in the treasury ask him to get for you a set diers in the field, all but $56,000 have of ones or twos, or fives if you prefer, bearing the autographs of all the treasurers of the greenback era, from Spinner down to Huston. Though the bills look much alike and there are but seven power feit. No sooner does she see that else." And it has to be done. Just now the order has gone forth to stop wearing the empire dresses, though the directoire styles are still to be permitted us. Why this is nobody can say, but so it is.

DAINTY DRESSES FOR DARLINGS. The empire styles are particularly becoming to graceful young girls and to slender ones they are a boon, as their full folds across the bust and shoulders conceal any deficiency that nature left. And the style is so simple that it is in keeping with youth and madenly daintiness. Still there is one consolation: It takes fully a year to entirely abolish a becoming fashion, and the young American girl of today can get a great deal of conquest and comfort out of that time.

At all the large social gatherings of this season the puffed sleeves and the gathered skirts have been oftener seen than any other style of dress for young girls and matrons. I was at a reception last night where there were many young girls, and the pretty dresses they wore somehow marked them as the fairest and sweetest among the multitude of other women dressed in the most extravagant style.

One young girl had a plain gown of pearl gray cashmere, the skirt perfectly plain at the bottom with a wide hem which was feather stitched with white and pointed front and back and laced with silver cords. The neck was V shaped and a frill of white lace two and one-half inches wide was sewn in the neck, falling outward in careless fashion. The elbow puffed sleeves were finished in a similar way.

Wilson, the youngest sister of Mrs. Og- even if the leaves are partly covered. den Goelet. She is the same young lady who was so ill in Paris a few months ago that she was at one time thought to be dead. Her features are still pale and delicate, but her beautiful eyes and thick crop of curly, short hair make her something pleasant to look at, and she could have worn a dress costing a million if she had wanted to. I noticed that all young ladies there present, and they represented the youth and beauty of the famous 400, wore their hair in braids coiled close and flat to the head, low in the back of the neck, with very little hair down over their foreheads. Some wore none, but only such as had very pretty, low foreheads. A few soft, light curls certainly do add to beauty.

Young ladies wear little jewelry. One or two pretty bracelets, delicate and fine, a string of pearls or old fashioned gold beads, or a thin little gold chain with a quaint old locket medallion or other family jewel, is about the extent. Few wear earrings at all, and the European habit of leaving diamonds and costly raiment to older persons and dressing youth and beauty in the simplest attire is fast obtaining here.

Some young girls wear their hair in chatelaine braids and others pile it on top of their heads plainly or around queer old carven combs. The hair, however, should be dressed always with due regard for the style of the day, but also with due regard for the style of the wearer's face.

BEAUTIFUL GOWNS FOR DANCING OR DIN-

When a girl has pretty, round arms short sleeves are admissible. With these are worn long silk mitts, suede gloves or black ones which reach above the elbow. Black pebble kid Oxford or Newport ties can be worn during the day for full dress, and for evening slippers of kid or satin, usually black, but sometimes of the color of the gown, are worn. APPLICATION OF FERTILIZERS.

Timely Advice About Sowing Broadcast. Applying in Hill or Drift.

Bone dust flour and most other commercial fertilizers, when fresh, are quite dry, so that gardeners find it often inconvenient and rather wasteful to apply these broadcast in the usual method of sowing by hand.

Popular Cardening calls attention to the fact that the fertilizer attachment which now goes with any good grain NEW YORK, May 16.—Fashion is a drill distributes such fertilizer in a perjeaious goddess and likes to make her feet way, and without waste, and there are also separate fertilizer drills in the her slaves have humbly accepted her market. This machine method has its last caprice than she turns squarely advantages over hand application. It about and says: "You shall not wear not only distributes the fertilizer evenly, this and that any longer, but something | but also stirs it into the soil; and as for the application of larger quantities, the ground can be gone over repeatedly, and if each time crosswise or diagonally of the previous application, the mixture of soil and fertilizer will be made thorough.

The extensive plamer, as in all similar eases, has an advantage over the gardener, whose limited operations hardly allow him the use of machinery. But even if compelled to resort to hand application of fertilizers the gardener has a way out of the dilemma. All that is needed is to moisten the fertilizer sufficiently, just before applying it, so the wind will not carry it off in dust form. Put a layer of the stuff into a tight box, or on a tight barn floor, and sprinkle it with water, then put another dry layer upon it, and Moulding sprinkle again. Now shovel the whole mass over repeatedly until thoroughly mixed and uniformly damp enough for convenient handling. The whole matter is so very simple that there is no need of people sowing dusty fertilizers in a dust laden atmosphere, filling their lungs and clothes with the disagreeable stuff.

For application to the drills or rows also, there is no reason why the same plan should not be followed, says the authority quoted. The greater convenience in handling damp fertilizer, freedom from dust, and avoidance of waste -these are advantages well worthy of consideration by every gardener, whether he operates on a large or small scale.

The harrow should always soon folow after broadcast application of fertilizer by hand. It is important that the latter be thoroughly mixed with the surface soil.

Cabbages After Early Potatoes.

To get a good crop of cabbage after early potatoes, it is only necessary to have good, strong, healthy plants to begin with, says T. F. Baker, of New Jersey, in American Agriculturist.

To obtain such plants, sow the seed in drills, not less than one foot apart, and thinly in the row, the last week of May or the first week in June. One ounce of seed will produce 2,000 plants, and if properly cultivated on good soil will produce the best plants in thirty days or by silk. The waist was long on the hips July 1. After digging, the potato patch should be freshly plowed, and the soil thoroughly pulverized.

Mr. Baker's plan is then to open furrows four feet apart and apply 500 pounds of some good fertilizer per acre in these rows, covering with a corn coverer, and set the plants three feet apart This gown was worn by Miss Grace on these ridges. Cover them deeply, Should the soil be dry or a dry spell be likely to follow, tramp around each plant after setting. It is best to lift the plants with a digging fork rather than pull them from the seed bed, especially if at all dry. Last year he sowed both Flat Dutch cabbage and caulillower seed on June 1, had fine plants to set out June 29, and had both cabbage and cauliflower ready for market Sept. 28.

Asparagus in Vineyards.

In France immense quantities of asparagus are grown between the vines in the vineyards, the plants being put out singly wherever there is room, and in time fine clumps are formed. In England many acres of asparagus are planted in the breaks between the rows of young orchard trees, much as fruit bushes are often grown, and very profitable crops are cut from them every season. On the fertile soils round Cheltenham, for instance, asparagus is very simply and well grown, the produce, if more pains were taken in blanching it, being equal to that obtained from France. Near London, notably in Essex, a row of asparagus is frequently planted between the fruit bushes, and of the two crops proves the more profitable. These facts are mentioned by an English writer in order to suggest to amateurs and others where they, too, may grow this valuable vegetable without encreaching on their limited garden ground. It is almost useless to plant asparagus in old fruit quarters, where it would not have fair play; but supposing young bushes are put out, or have not long been planted, four feet apart in rows five feet apart, single plants might well be put midway between the bushes, and a row between the lines of bushes or trees, as the case may be. These may remain undisturbed for many years, and if duly manured from the surface will never fail to be remunerative.

MORE BLACKMAIL.

ARMOUR & CO. THE PLAINTIFFS, FRED. SIBILA, DEFENDANT.

He is Charged with Endeavoring to Extort Money and Secure a Receipted Bill by Unfair Means.

Another sensational case developed in before Justice Rogers last week involving on one side the great Chicago firm of Armour & Co., and on the other Fred Sibila, who for some time has been handling that firm's dressed beef, on West Main street. A Chicago representative of Armour & Co. is on the ground and from the atfidavit, the suit promises to be intensely interesting.

The affidavit charges that on the 18th of May, Frederick Sibila did feloniously and falsely accuse Armour & Co, represented by Adolph Katzenberg, with knowingly selling and delivering to him diseased and spoiled beef, and did threaten to expose the same to the public and the board of health, to the great injury of Armour & Co., unless that firm should pay him (Sibila) the sum of $300 and surrender an account which they then had against him. It further charges that this he did to extort and gain from Armour & Co. the sum of $300 and an account valued at $120, contrary to the statutes of Ohio.

The defendant entered a plea of not guilty, and gave bond for his appearance next Thursday. O. E. Young is attorney for Armour & Co., and William McMillan attorney for Mr. Sibila.

Representative Manson, of Armour & Co., states that he was called here by telegraph to settle the dispute, and that Mr. Sitila renewed his threats in his presence. He says that there is no toundation in fact for the charge that the beef was diseased, and that he used his efforts to effect a private settlement, but they were in vain. Mr. Armonr, he declares, will not compromise a case affecting his business reputation as this does, and he proposes to bring it to a definite issue.

After leaving Justice Rogers's court with Health Officer Miller and the sanitary inspector. Dr. Miller was seen after his visit but declined to talk for publication.

MR. SIBILA EXPLAINS HIS SIDE,

And Both are Prepared to Fight Before the Courts.

Frederick Sibila, whose prosecution by Armour & Co. for blackmail was the talk of the town Saturday night, scouts at the idea of blackmail. He says that he has been buying Armour's meat for some time, and when enabled to select for abscess full of pus and which he could not expose for sale. He related the cirgive him another. He refused to do so, and finally said that as his trade was $300, the amount he had invested in the business, and relieve him of the bill owing Armour of $120. This, he says, constitutes the whole blackmail story.

Mr. Henson, representing Armour & Co., speaks freely, adhering strictly to the charges of the affidavit. He admits that there was an abscess in the particular piece of beef, the result of a bruise, which could not have been detected on the boof. But he also says that it did not affect the piece as a whole, and he is entirely willing to have it examined in support of his statement. He repeats the charges of attempted blackmail, the penalty for non-compliance being threatened exposure.

At the Sibila market home-killed meat is now being sold.

A FLAG PRESENTATION.

Hart Post Accepts an Appreciated Gift from a Massillon Saltor.

A gallant and trim jack-tar sat behind Post Commander Ellis in Hart Post's hall Friday, and when the latter had called the crowd, which completely filled the room, to order, he introduced him as Henry Fals, the vonng quartermaster this city Saturday and was brought of the U.S.S. "Essex," now spending a ten days' leave of absence at hisold home and birthplace,

> The sailor in few and modest words told the old vets and their friends how, when a man-of-war leaves for its own country from foreign parts, a long streamer, pennant and brand new flag announce the fact, and the men of other ships mount the yards and cheer the boys who are homewardbound. The flag is called "homeward bound," and when the long voyage is over it falls to the possession of whoever has charge of it. That duty and privilege had been his on his last trip, and he took pleasure in presenting to the post a naval flag 15x25 that had flown from a war vessel as she travelled 16.000 miles.

Commander Ellis made a brief acknowledgement, and asked Prof. E. A. Jones to accept it. Mr. Jones did so in titting terms, taking occasion to briefly recount the history of the national ensign. He spoke of the change from thirteen stripes and thirteen stars, lo fifteen of each, and of the change again to thirteen stripes and one star for every state, mentioning that in the land flag proper the stars were arranged in the form of a star, while in the naval flag they appeared in paratlel lines. Dr. T. C. Miller next spoke of the affection that every American should have for the national banner, but questioned whether any but the old soldiers who had looked for it. through the battle smoke as their only guide, could really love it as they should. He also spoke of the incident of the American sailorscheering and their band playing, while their ship went down in the storm at Samoa, as a thrillin proof that patriotism and heroism were still active as ever. Mr. R. A. Pinn followed in the same line of thought, and room, Mr. Sibila proceeded to his market | Mr. C. E. Tinkler closed the speaking by hoping that a flag which the Sons of Veterans would cherish, would not descend to them for many years.

WILLING TO ARBITRATE.

Warthorst & Co. Make a Proposition to Their Men.

A decidedly new turn has been taken in the affairs of the striking quarrymen, and it is generally to be hoped that a solution of the wage question between them and Warthorst & Co. may speedily follow. After having seitled with their men, a proposition was made by the firm, to submit the question of wages to himself secured good meat, and at other | a board of arbitration, consisting of three times was forced to accept culls. It culminated in his receiving | it now remains for the other side either a quarter of beef in which he found an to accept or reject the proposition. The propriety of arbitrating all such matters has been advanced as the foundation cumstances to Armour's agent, who stone of most labor organizations, but wanted to take the quarter back and the difficulty has always been to find employers willing to abide by decisions so reached. A BOARD OF ARBITRATION.

To Decide the Differences Between the Quarrymen and Warthorst & Co.

Like a sensible set of fellows, the striking quarrymen agreed with but lit tle discussion to accept the proposition of Warthorst & Co, submitted last week. That proposition was to accept the determination of a board of arbitration. one member to be selected by the firm, one by the men, and the iwo so chosen to find the third.

A committee appeared at the office Friday, and after formally communicating this decision, named John Russ sell, the stone contractor, as their representative. Warthorst & Co. authorized J. F. PULLED A GUN ON HIM,

BUT AS IT WAS IN A LEATHER CASE NO BLOOD WAS SPILLED.

Encounter on a London Street Between M Rochefort, the Fiery Editor, and M Pilotel-The Fracas Stopped by Policemen Arristing Both Men-Rochefort Charged With Assault and Held to

LONDON, May 20.—While Henri Roche fort, ascompanied by triends, was walk ing in Regent street Saturday night he M. Pilotel. Angry words were exchanged and Pilotel threatened to strike Rochefort unless he assented to a duel. Rochetort drew a revolver and was about to fire at him when a bystander seized the weapon. A policeman arrested the two men and took them to the station, where Photel charged Rochefort with assault. The revolver was found to be fully charged. Rochefort was bailed.

The encounter between M. Rochefort and Pilotel on Regent street Saturday evening is the senation of the hour Both gentlemen have been besieged by interviewers and their statements con cerning the affair are widely at varience M. Rochefort, who was first seen, gave the following version of the affair: was walking along Regent street about 7 o'clock Saturday evening when suddenly I saw Pilotel walking toward me. He stopped in front of me and struck a pugilistic attitude, at the same time threatening to punch my head.' Now, fisticults are not in my line, although I am not a timid man, as my duelling experience attests.

Pulls a Gun on Him.

"Pilotel continued his threatening language, and merely for the purpose of frightening him I drew a revolver from my breast pocket and pointed it at him. The pistol was in a leather case, tightly clasped, so that I could not possibly have fired if I had wished to do so. When he saw the harmless weapon he dropped his hands and ran away at the top of his speed, bellowing murder. In spite of the serious view taken of the affair by the police and bystanders, they could not control their laughter at the fellow's cowardice any more than they could conceal their contempt for his conduct."

Pilotel's Version of the Affair. The version given by Mr. Pilotel differs in almost every particular from that of the fiery editor. He insists that the pistol was not only without a case, but that it was cocked and manifestly intended to be discharged. Mr. Pilotel de nies that he ran away, and, strictly speaking, he didn't, for he had scarcely turned his back upon his antagonist and started to run when he was seized by the

Will No Longer Pay Tribute. The Bulgarian government has decided that it will no longer pay Roumelian tribute to the porte and has so notified the authorities at Constantinople. The Ottoman government will immediately send commissioners to Sofia to combat the decision, and in the event of failure to overthrow it will appeal to the powers to take cognizance of this deliberate violation of the treaty of Berlin.

Bismark's Bad Temper.

It is believed in Berlin that Prince Bismark's exhibition of temper in the Reichstag Saturday was due much more to the fact that the Conservatives did not support him than to the gibes of Herr Rich-The strikes in Westphalia and Silesia have completely upset the chancel lor's calculations with regard to the aged workmen's insurance bill, and he feels the increased opposition to the measure

Giving Them a Grand Send-Off.

The Covernment Building at Baltimore Botch From Beginning to End.

Baltimone, May 20.-A local paper has published an article directed against contractors of the new postolace building in Baltimore, and the late superintendent J. Crawford Neilson, who was appointed by President Cleveland four years ago. He was removed three weeks ago and his predecessor, Jackson Holland, re-instated. The building was begun in 1889 and is nearly completed. Holland says that the work was not done satisfactory but his predecessor accepted it. Several communitors were paid last fall: others have not and wontget any money until they fill the contracts according to specifications. He says the building is a botch from roof to cellar. According to contract the basement floor should have been gravel concrete topped with two inches of Portland cement; instead of this cook ashes and shavings were used, covered with an inch of Cumperland cement. The area ways are not graded, and every rain makes pools of water six inches deep on the uncaven surface. He has condemned the sewerage also. Terra cotta pipes have been used instead of iron. The marble work, done by Davidson & Bro., of Chicago, is characterized as disgraceful, and for the enormous sum the government paid for it, it has received the worst work of the kind probably ever done in the country. The arches over the doorways are made from odds and ends and are of every variety of finish. The work in one room alone vill have to be replaced. The roof of the building leaks like a pepper box, and the recentrains flooded the building. Basement windows have marble sills from 2 to 6 inches short, and the steps on the iron stair cases are two inches short.

A Cow Runs Amuck.

CARBONDALE, Pa., May 20,-An infur:ated cow held high carnival on one of the principal streets here Saturday. On Tuesday she gave birth to a calf and Saturday for the first time was separated from it and she became wild with anger. She rushed through the street, head down, goring a boy about the body and cutting his head frightfully. Her next victim was a girl, whom she knocked down and injured seriously. Then she attacked a fence and tore it in pieces. The animal was finally quieted by the restoration of the calf.

Commerce Greatly Benefitted.

BOSTON, May 20.-At the regular monthly meeting of the oil trade association of New England, resolutions were adopted addresse to the senate committee on trade with Canada, stating that the existence of a route-through Canada had greatly benefitted commerce between New England and the western states: had prevented exorbitant charges by the all-American lines and had drawn large amounts of Canadian products to Boston for export. The association hopes there will be no restrictions placed upon this commercial route.

Elections for Postmasters.

FREDERICK, Md., May 20.—The people of Creagerstown and Middletown, this county, have decided to hold elections for their respective postmasters. Two Hundred Bulldogs Ordered.

LIMA, O., May 20.-The Standard Oil company has placed an order in Philadelphia for 200 bulldogs, which will be used to guard the Standard tanks in the Ohio field against tramps. Numerous fires have been caused by the pipes of tramps, and it is thought the bulldogs will keep them away.

Frederick T. Roberts, M. D., physician o and professor of clinical medicine at University College Hospital, London, Eng., says: 'Bright's Disease has no symptoms of its own, and may long exist without the knowledge of the patient or practitioner, as no pain will be felt in the kidneys or that vicinity." This ac counts for many people dying with Bright's Disease, or advanced kidney malady. The disease is not suspected until it reaches a fatal period. If War ner's Safe Cure is used at the proper time, the fatality from that disease would be greatly decreased. Dr. Thompson also says: "More adults are carried off in this country by chronic kidney disease than by any other one malady ex-

The late Dr. Dio Lewis, in speaking of Wainer's Safe Cure, said, over his own signature: "If I found myself the victim of a serious kidney trouble, 1 would use Warner's Safe Cure." He als a said "The medical profession stands dazed and helptess in the presence of more than one kidney malady."

The Independent's Telephone No. is 43. THURSDAY, MAY 23, 1889.

Baltimore hopes to rival New York as an exporting city. Its trade is increasing rapidly. The reason for it is thus put by the Hon. John S. Bullock: "This is owing in great measure, to the policy adopted by our authorities in exempting almost entirely all manufactures and manufacturing establishments from local taxation. Today we can, and do, export more goods than all the world together."

The whole people, of Massillon, will be glad to know that the striking quarrymen have now an opportunity to arbitrate with their emplowers. upon the question of wages. May it so be that both parties to the controversy will speedily agree as to what is just and right. We have not room in Massillon for i'll feeling, or strikes, oridle men, or destitute fam-

The story of the Roman youth, who held his hand in fire to prove his valor, is nothing to the bravery of the dying Charles Lappam, a fireman, caught under the red-hot fire box of his engine, near Denver, by an accident, where he lay for an hour, his head only exposed, suffering anguish indescribable. Yet while enduring the most excruciating agony, he called a brakeman, dictated a will, gave instructions regarding his funeral, offered a prayer, and

But THE INDEPEND-ENT can say that it hopes that this peace will continue, that plenty of work will follow, that the good sense as to wages, will distinguish all future settlements. For a quarter of a century the weekly edition of this paper has been regularly issued. It has an established clientage, which increases from day to day. With in the last two months the increase has been very striking, and especially among the miners of this valley. The miner readers of The Independent now number one thousand, and the accessions average one hundred every week. Thus two classes of patrons have been formed, one desiring local news and the other mining news, and it is no longer possible to satisfy both classes with the same edition. In view of this condition of affairs it has been decided to issue another edition of THE INDEPENDENT for the especial benefit of the miners of Ohio. The success of the venture is not a matter for speculation, since it will have a paid up list of subscribers to start with, and at the same time the county and far away readers of $T_{\rm HE}$ INDEPENDENT will be supplied with such matter as will better suit their tastes. A large amount of work is subscription list, and making mechanical changes so that further than to announce this determination nothing more can now be stated.

As the case now stands, Ohio is idly waiting for something to turn up in the way of canal improvements, while Pennsylvania is preparing to cut us out for good, by the construction of an entirely new canal, a work which could not possibly go on if the Ohio canal should be enlarged.

It was given out a short time ago not be built on account of natural obstructions. This, it seems, was true of but one route. The enterprise not only lives but gives bright promise. Such men as Andrew Carnegie are pushing the project, and here is the most recent information sweet morsel under her tongue. Whenconcerning it:

"A petition is being prepared by members of the chamber of commerce and other prominent gentlemen in the city, to be sent to the governor, asking for the appointment of Col. T. P. Roberts as a member of the committee of five to be appointed for the purpose of looking into the practicability of the proposed ship canal between Lake Erie and Pitts-

A BRITISH ESTIMATE.

The comments of the London Times on the New York centennial would be exceedingly funny if not so malicious. There is no danger that the great American tail-twisters will die out so long as British opinion ecntinues to be as supercilious and contemptuous as at present.

The Times agrees that the parade was highly satisfactory from "a scenic point of view," but not calculated to impress "foreigners accustomed to the more business like and professional manœuvres of troops in European military states." In another paragraph it notes that "two of Mr. Cleveland's cabinet, Mr. Endicott and Mr. Whitney, quitted New York for Europe before this monster celebration, and with the note of preparation for it ringing in their From that large and increasing ears." It "cordially congratulates" class of readers of The Independent | these gentlemen and "compassionates" Mr. Harrison for being comcomes, what position does the paper | pelled to "remain in view, the center and focus of the waving triumphal turmoil." That "mortal nerves enone, especially at this time when dured the strain without rupture and paralysis" is certainly "an Amer ican constitutional secret" and almost as surprising "is the keenness of appetite of the American people which characterized the settlement at large for a succession of gigantic of the recent important controversy shows, of which it is fatiguing to partake at the distance of several thousand miles."

The Times then quits its cold and malignant review of the celebration to disparage "much of the poetry of heroism" about Washington, and what is more asserts that "he was not a master thinker any more than he was a military general."

It is of small importance what the London Times thinks, except as it gives us a key to the pretended fraternal sentiments supposed to animate the British breast. We know well enough that the European soldiery, trained and paid at the expense of an over-taxed population, may perhaps drill a trifle better. But to us, far grander than mere skill at arms is the reflection that our army has been created by the voluntary act of its members, who are ready to fight or ready to work. but never willing to be a drag upon their country. And as to Washington, the union of the United States speaks for him. It is a great fact, and here it stands silently giving the lie to the warped slanders from across the ocean.

Mr. Sullivan is reported to be bracing up, living on milk and honey, splitting wood and building rail fences. It is cheering to hear of Mr. Sullivan doing such really useful work as splitting wood and building fences, even if his object is to get into condition to subjugate Mr. Kilrain.

Women can marry as well as be married. The learned and just judge of Wayne county has decided connected with the division of the that in the absence of law to the contrary, there is no reason why female preachers cannot tie the matrimonial knot.

A FEMALE FIEND

WHO HAS A MANIA FOR SURGERY Brought to Book at Last.-George Francis Train and His

Baby Friends BROOKLYN, May 22, 1889.-The terrible revelations that have recently been made in reference to the Woman's Hospital of the city, presided over by Dr. that the Pennsylvania canal could Mary Dixon Jones, ought to be a lesson to every woman not to trust implicitly to the advice of any physician, where a surgical operation is involved. It would appear that Dr. Jones had a mania for surgery, and diagnosed almost every ease as a tumor or a cancer, or a cancer ous tumor. She was especially find of the last combination, and rolled it as a ever she could coax a woman to the operating table, her happiness was com-The consequence was that as very few of the patients were suffering with the disease sile had credited them with, operations were performed on healthy organs, and the patients who did not die were made helpless invalids for life. When death resulted, Mrs. Jones would hurry the bodies out of the hospital under cover of the night, and in one case at least, a couple of undertakers were sent for before the patient died, and waited half an hour for the breath to leave her body. It is impossible that there should be many such practitioners as this fiend in human shape, but there is enough danger of ignorant or unprofessional diagnoses to make women careful to chose their physicians from those who are not only skillful with the knife sole responsibility of a delicate surgical operation. He will insist upon having gave her, and the son seemed as much of a lunatic on the subject of cancerous tumors as his mother. One of the most aggravating features of of this case is that several of our best known and most influential women knew the character of Mrs. Jones a long time ago, and because they did not like to get mixed up in anything so unsavory as the affairs

f this woman, they allow the fraud and butchery to continue. George Francis Train is generally nown as a crank when he is not considered a lunatic, but mad or eccentric the children adore him. There is probably not another man on the face of the earth to-day who has so many friends among the little ones. Mothers trust him implicitly, and are always pleased to have their brood under his wing. He is sane and wise enough to tell the proper stories, and is most judicious in his management, and can compel instant obedience from the most fractious and wilful. The picnic which Mr. Train gave the children last Saturday was a most enjoyable affair. It took two horse cars to transport the party to Central Park. The children were of assorted sizes, all the way from tiny tots to ten year olds. Notwithstanding the fact that Mr. Train has not tasted food for twenty days, he was as bright and cherry and apparently as strong as ever. -Eleanor Kirk.

We notice from the press that the littsburg miners have effected a settlement with the operators for the yearly scale of prices, and that, too, at one cent per ton better wages than the Ohio cale. The fact that N. D A. 135, took charge of the miners' trouble at Pittsburg and made a success out of it does not reflect very creditably on those who disfranchised them from having a hearing in their own behalf at Indianapolis. The Pittsburg miners holding their scale for the year a cent higher than the Ohio scale after the latter had been agreed upon and closed must be considered quite a victory. A motion to set uside this certification was made before Secretary Lamar. An examination of the land was made, and the reports made showed that some of the land represented as swamp land was rock-ribbed mountain land, other timberland, etc. Without making any decision Mr. Lamar went out of office and Mr. Vilas became secretary of the interior. He directed a re-examination, and upon reports made to him directed the original certification set aside, and ordered that such land as was found to be swamp land be certifled to the state of Oregon as such, and such land as was found arable and timber land be restored

WOMEN CAN MARRY.

A Wayne County Judge so decides.

The Rev. Mrs. Ellen Runkle is a minister of the Dunkard church whose home is near Smithville, Wayne county. The question as to whether a woman could be granted license to solemnize marriages was raised some time ago upon the refusal of the probate judge, of Wayne county, to grant Mrs. Runkle a license. He did however, agree to consult the attorney general. The Wooster Republican furnishes the concluding chapter: "This he did, but that official refused to give an opinion. Judge Swartz resolved to take the "bull by the horns" as it were, and as he could find no law which forbids the granting of license to women to celebrate marriage ceremonies, he issued the coveted papers to Mrs. Runkle. It is thought that she is the first woman ever vested with the right."

A LOCAL AID ASSOCIATION

Likely to be Organized by the Hands at Russell & Co.'s

An unwritten law recognized at Russell &Co.'s is that the sick and injured must be in part, at least, aided by their fellow-workmen. In securing funds by voluntary subscription, it has necessarily followed that the burden falls very une qually, and therefore heavily upon many. With 700 names on the pay roll, the illness of somebody can always be counted on, and therefore those who do contribute to the assistance fund, count among their expenses a certain proportion of pay, which goes for the purpose mentioned. The time has now Suspension will follow a violation of the | been reached when some more systematic method must be adopted, and it has been informally decided to organize a mutual aid society. Its members will deposit with the firm a regular amount and payments will be made on some plan hereafter to be settled.

The movement is none too soon, and cannot fail to accomplish its purpose. This has been the experience wherever tried, and there can be little doubt but that the example of Russell & Co.'s force will be followed in many other of the factories about the city.

From Frank J. Sprenger, who writes from Rome under date of May 7, come the following interesting lines to his sister:

I will stay here about two weeks, and will then go to Naples, Milan and Zurich. I am too tired to write more." In a postscript he says: "By means of letters furnished me at Munich, I will see the Pope at 11 o'clock.'

A Convenient Rack to Feed Cattle from in the Yard, and Used at the bench-A New Feed Box Recommendal by an

A rack to feed cattle from in the yord, which is pronounced for superior in point of economy and convenience to anything of the kind seen by Southern Cultivator is described as follows:

three or four inches through will do very | inches apart in the rows well), and twelve boards, each one foot in width and five feet long. These latter

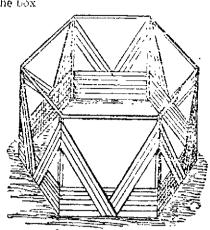

FIG 1-A CONVENIENT FEED RACK. To strengthen the whole and keep the cattle from stepping over the sides, nail strips of thick boards or plank flatwise across the upper end of the posts. Then nail two boards diagonally upon each side, extending from the top of the posts to the bottom of the box, leaving a space of about a foot and a half in the center on a line with the upper edge of the box. These slanting boards serve as braces, and give strength and firmness to the whole structure, and make six feeding places for the cattle. If scantling is used for posts, it would be well to hew off the corner from each so as to make the boards fit well.

Mode of construction: Nail the boards to two sets of posts to form two opposite sides. Cut two strips of boards about ten feet four inches long; stand the side upright and nail these strips across the top and bottom-across the diameterthen bring the other ends within five feet and nail on the boards across the end; you will then have three sides formed. Nail on the other two opposite sides and end. Put on the braces and it is done. It can be moved to different parts of the yard, and with care will last gested by a correspondent of Rural New Yorker for preventing the "boss" cow or steer from monopolizing the feed rack or water trough while other more hungry animals stand and wait for it to satisfy itself and move away.

The device consists of making a trough or box, four or five feet square, and extending a stall or partition from the corners, so that at least four animals can be fed or watered at a time without materially interfering with each other.

In the Orchard.

A correspondent in Rural Home makes the following statements, which are of general interest:

The owner of light soil should choose hardier varieties than a man having loam or clay. The reason is simple. In extra hard winters if a tree is more or less injured it has twice as good a chance to recover on good soil as on poor.

The Baldwin takes the lead as an apple suited for light soil, where the climate is not too hard for it. I need hardly say it is a tender variety, and judgment must Next in order comes the Red Astrachan. but that is a poor keeper. I should place Mann third.

My experience in pears is that one variety does as well as another, only excepting Keiffer, which grows like a weed on my soil. Its drawback is that it is not any too hardy, but if protected in cold latitudes for the first three or four years by straw around the trunk, it is all right. I will mention three good and hardy kinds that do well with me. They are Chapp's Favor. Bourte d'Anjou and Flemish Beauty Plums I would advise every man on light sand to let severely alone. If he must leave half a dozen, then large holes should be dugand clay and top soil used to fill up, not less than one load to each tree. Early Richmond, Governor Wood and May Duke do well in the cherry list, and all are famly hardy

Stable Rules.

Let your horse stand loose, if possible without being tied up to the manger Pain and wearings from a confined position include bad habits

Never allow any one to tease your horse in the stable. The animal only feels the torment and does not understand the joke

Keep a horse's bedding dry and clean underneath as well as on top. Standing in hot, fermenting manure causes thrush.

When a horse comes in from a journey, the first thing is to walk him around until he is cool. This prevents his taking cold. The next thing is to rub him dry. This removes dust, dirt and sweat and allows time to recover and the appetite to return. Also, have his legs | management of the cream from the time well rubbed by the hand; nothing so it is separated from the milk until it goes soon removes a strain.

FODDER CORN AND FODDER CANE.

Conclusions of the Director of the Mary and Experiment Station.

In a balletin issued by the Maryland Agriculand Experiment station, H. E. Alvord, director, gives the following conclusions in regard to the growth of fodder corn and fodder cane:

For the greatest quantity of fodder. green or dry, corn or cane should be grown in drills far enough apart to perthat easy and sufficient cultivation, the space between the rows to be governed somewhat by the size of varieties grown and the plants to be thin enough in the drills to give ample air and light to as-The shape, as will be seen, is six sided, I sure maturity. For corn of the larger or in the form of a hexagon. It consists (varieties, the nearest definite rule that of six apright posts five teet long GMA can be safely given is to plant the rows scantling will answer, or round poles | 3 to 3 + feet apart and single stalks 6 to 8

For best quality of fodder the same method should be followed as for greatnailed to the posts horizontally will form; est quantity. The chemical composition of fodder corn grown in different ways is found to be very similar, and the exceptions occurring do not justify any moduleation of the advice just given for getting best quality. The nutritive ratio and percentage of dry substance digestible are slightly in favor of the thicker seeding, but not enough so to compensate for loss in quantity of crop. Thick seeding appears to cause a decrease in the relative amount of nitrogen in the albuminoid form. This diminishes the value of the fodder, as the amide nitrogen is considered to have less nutritive value.

To get the most food value on an acre of corn or cane it should not be cut till the plants begin to show signs of drying and withering and the seeds begin to glaze. The product of an acre of sowed corn, as ordinarily grown, has usually a food value little more than half as great as the product of the same acre in drills. as above advised. The labor expended in the cultivation required by the drill system is profitably applied, as shown by the saving of seed and the increased

A crop of fodder corn, grown in drills and well cultivated, serves to clean and improve the land. Sowed corn [broadcast| or thickly drilled fodder allows weeds and grass to grow and perfect their seeds, and "fouls" the land. To grow a large crop of fodder corn or fodder cane, rich land is needed; but heavy manuring, good seed and good cultivation are profitable in securing a good crop; twenty to thirty tons green weight is not an uncommon yield, being an equivalent in food value of five to eight tons of good hay per acre.

The variety of sorghum known as early amber cane, grown under conditions identical with Indian corn, as a forage plant, and in an unfavorable season, produced (-om one to four tons per acre of green fodder more than corn, at this station. As to quality for forage, the cane compared favorably with corn.

A Cure for Roaring,

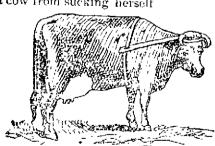

It may interest owners of horses to know that the mare ridden by Col. Edwards in the Old Berks Hunt club race, and who finished second, was a very bad roarer (hence her name "Aroara"), but was operated upon by Mr. Jones, of Leicester, who inserted a tracheotomy tube. Considering the length of the course, a ground and big fences, her performance was a wonderful testimony to the efficiency of Mr. Jones' operation. The tube which is inserted in the trachea of the throat is certainly a wonderful thing. The time occupied in this race was nineteen minutes.

Using Chloroform on Bees.

In reply to the query, "Can chloroform be used with safety on bees?" the editor of Gleanings in Bee Culture says:

"Bees can be chloroformed so that they will fall down on the bottom board, or stick to the combs, apparently dead. The idea is very old; but I believe that one after another who have tried it have decided that they would much rather have live bees to manipulate than dead ones. Smoke is very much handier and cheaper, and at the same time accomplishes the purpose far better than chloroform."

Device for Curing a Self Sucking Cow. In the accompanying cut is represented a device recently described by Ohic Farmer as being of value in preventing a cow from sucking herself

SELF SUCKING PREVENTED

Take a strip of wood one by one and a half inches and about four feet long. Make holes near the ends, and pass straps through them-one to buckle around the horns and the other around the body back of the fore legs. Buckle this strait tight. The cow cannot turn her head either was far enough to reach the udder, and the device will not binder her from pastining or from the free use of the head, except in the one direction

Farm Notes.

A well known New Jersey murseryman has declared that "crowding is one cause of peach yellows. It your trees are too tines, pall out every other row, and as a rule you will cure the venows. Trees are sometimes set as close as eight or ten feet, but should be eighteen or twenty feet apart.'

Over feeding is the common bane of the pig, according to The American Agriculturist, which advises a pant of milk and two oances of boiled cornmeal mixed as a daily ration for the first week, and a gradual increase may be made, substituting raw cornmeal

A LOOK AT LOS ANGELES.

MARKED DEGENERATION OF A ONCE PROSPEROUS PLACE.

The Boom Was Only Temporary, and the Reaction Has Set In Some of the Trials of Ostrich Farming, and Two Fallucies About Ostriches.

[Special Correspondence.]

Los Angenes, May 2.- This is not the Los Angeles of two years, or even one year, ago. Then the town was in a tumult of prosperity. A boom from the east bad swept over southern California and the storm center was this City of the Angels. Eastern capital joined in here and eastern men flocked to this seetion by the thousands. Real estate jumped to points far beyond its intrinsic value, and buyers were both reckless and namerous. The spirit of speculation was abroad, and land was the one marketable commodity. It seemed that | people couldn't get enough of it. Like Col. Sellers' eye water, the more they had, the more they wanted. The result was that out near the footbills, miles away from town, farm lands were cut up into city lots and freely sold. The transactions in real estate were something enormous. Shrewd men made lots of money by quick turn; they spent it freely, and for a time no city in the wide world throve as did Los Angeles. Business of all kinds participated in the fictitious glory of the land. Not a store or dwelling was vacant in the entire town, and the supply by no means equaled the demand. Buildings flew up to accommodate the incoming crowds in search of the golden fleece and great was the joy of the residents. But the reaction came with startling suddenness. Quickly as the boom appeared, just so quickly did it vanish. The bottom fell out of the bucket in a month, and the beetic, unnatural flush of yesterday turned into a severe and settled state of the blues. It need not be said, however, that Los Angeles is now dead or even sleeping. The boom, while it lasted, helped not a little. It gave such an impetus to building, and so urged the march of improvement, that this vicinity is much larger and finer and richer than it was three years ago. People from the east have erected elaborate homes here. Business men have invested largely in lasting improvements, and there is a certain stir and go to the community that argues well for the future. But the struggle is going to be a mighty hard one. A walk through the streets of Los Angeles reveals an alarming array of "To Lets," and the real estate offices not forever closed are alluring in their proffer of splendid lots and fine lands for astonishingly small sums of money. Sellers, however, are many and buyers few. For my part I cannot see how Los Angeles can ever hope to be really great, in a manufacturing or even commercial sense, nor can the many men in all conditions of life with whom I have talked give any reasonable hope for that wished for consummation. They have here neither wood nor coal, and there is no raw material to be developed by the skilled artisan. A beautiful appearing farming country in winter, yes, and a climate as long four miles, the pace, the holding lovely as a poet's dream, but water is fearfully scarce, transportation is inconvenient and costly, common labor is high, and the vicissitudes of the farmer many. Nothing can be grown except by irrigation. Oranges will not produce until they have had five years' growth. Wheat is an unknown quantity except in certain valleys, and the dreamer who thought California a land of milk and honey, where the fig and the palm, the olive and the date, merely awaited his plucking, finds this to be a weary workaday world after all.

I drove yesterday out to Kenilworthwhere is located the ostrich farm-Ivanhoe and Glendale, and talked with the smaller colonists of that delightful locality. Nothing could be more charining, nothing seemed more prosperous. The foothills were deliciously green, the valleys abundant in the promise of rich harvests.

"You see our country at its best," said Granville Buechamp, the ostrich farmer, to me; "at its very best. I am a resident Californian, my interests are all here, and here in this byautiful state I expect to end my days. But it is not continuous sunshine, believe me. There are several months during our dry season when all is brown and bare and water is a luxury as well as a necessity. During last season water was so scarce that I had to pay $5 a day for water privilege, and, as my farm, and birds need much of it, the expense was greater than I can stand. As a result form going to move from here to San Monica, on to the coast, to a point where one of the little rivers of California empties. There I can perhaps make it pay, although ostrich farming in this country can never be very remunerative, unless on a large scale. If two or three men with ample means found an inexpensive fract, rich in alfalfa, and imported a lot of first class birds from the Cape and could afford to wait until nature brought the returns, money could be made. Ido not make money, nor do either of the other two ostrich farmers in California, but I like the novelty of the occupation, it is healthful and interesting. I do not know why I like it, for the ostrich is a mean and vicious bird. It will as readily attack and kill the man who feeds it every day as the stranger. It kicks forward and does all its damage with its long, iron like feet. The ostrich produces remarkable feathers when four years old, and then it is good for feathers annually until it dies, and it lives to a great age. I have some here that are forty years old. There are about fifty in all on my farm. The male bird hatches as well as the female. The two divide the time in sitting on the eggs. We do not use all the eggs for hatching. Somecorralled in two acre plots, and the older birds were paired off in smaller sections. When a visitor appeared at a distant point they flew down to him like the wind, in the hope of a few grains of fancy food, and when it was not forthcoming they turned about and minced away in the funniest manner imaginable. "There are two popular superstitions about ostriches," said M. Bucchamps. "One is that when the bird is frightened it will dig its head in the sand, and that being covered it feels that it is safe. The other is that it hides its eggs. Neither of these are true. I think I know all about the bird. I have been among them for years, and never knew either of these popular beliefs to be veri-

But if the farmers of Kenilworthand I talked with several not engaged in special occupation-are inclined to be doleful, there are many beautiful places in Los Angeles county where the water is abundant and the people are remarkably well to do. They can praise the country as it certainly deserves to be praised. It clearly needs but patience and industry to raise, with much prodigality and profit, oranges, limes, olives and raisins. But the trouble with many who come from the east is the expectation of sudden wealth. That cannot be secured, even in California, without toil and trouble, but with toil and trouble health and wealth can be won in this country quicker than in any state in the Union. This is my impression, after careful observation and protracted inquirv.

When you come to California you hear wonderful stories of fortunes made in a day by lucky land speculators. They are not fairy tales. Millions have been accumulated by eastern enterprise and thrift. While at the beautiful hotel, Hotel del Coronado, the other night I was told the story of that peninsula. It lies, you know, just opposite San Diego, and is a low desert tract of perhaps five miles in length. A and B came to this vicinity full of bounce and bustle. They bought the peninsula for $100,000. They then staked it out, planned the grandest hotel in the world, the loveliest drives, the most comfortable improvements. And while they were loudly proclaiming what they were going to do, they sold part of their purchase, plot by plot, until three million dollars' worth was disposed of, and they had plenty left.

I hear of C, who came to Los Angeles and with a little money bought a fine piece of land. He sold one lot, which paid for all his property. Then he bought and sold other land, and within two years was a bloated millionaire. I find these statements and many others of the kind to be gospel truth. But while they will tell you how well A, B and C made out, they make no mention of how D, E and F got along. I know them and can give you their experiences. D, for instance, was a New York man in business. Things were easy with him, but he caught the California fever, and, picking up stakes, he journeyed to Los Angeles. It was before the boom. He bought land, held it awhile and sold it at a very trifling profit. He returned to the east and while at home heard that the man to whom he had sold had sold again at a profit of $20,000. So back he rushed. This time he brought his wife, and together they purchased a plot near Pasedena for $2,000 and put up a house costing $3,000. That was the extent of D's pile. He might have sold soon after for $6,000, but he wasn't going to repeat the mistake of his first venture, so he held on. The boom came and went, and today he cannot sell at any price. There is no business at Pasedena. It is a charming place, but like a summer resort; therefore D and his wife are almost stranded. They sent to an acquaintance, Frank Loring, a Boston man who lives at Santa Barbara, and wanted to borrow $1,500 on the property to pay taxes, assessments, etc. He consulted the bank about it, and they reported that improvements counted for nothing; they valued the land only at what it would bring at farm prices; $1,500 was too large a loan by half. Today D is driving an ice cart in Los Angeles, and his wife has a job running the mail wagon from Monrovia to a settlement among the foothills. During chilly mornings she appears in a handsome sealskin dolman, a relic of past greatness. The people think she is eccentric. But she isn't; Land his wife are simply working hard to get enough Then there is E and F, of Santa Bar-to go back east. bara. When the railroad was nearing that exquisitive little place E and F felt the effects of the boom caused by that circumstance. Just how the railroad would help Santa Barbara no one stopped to consider. Enough that land was going up. E and F didn't have much money. They were merely industrious New York clerks; but between them they had $1,400 in cash which they wanted to increase, and they listened to the voice of the siren in the person of a real estate agent. He showed them two lots for $700 each "worth double the money." True, they were on the side of a steep hill, but the persuasive agent showed them how the value was greatly increased by that fact. "Excavations already done!" he exclaimed. "Splendid cellar in the rear actually made." So they bought, and owing to that natural collar, which they banked on, they held the lots at $1,500 each, and asked the agent to sell them. But he counseled going to another agent, as it wouldn't look well to have him selling and reselling, etc., etc. They did so, and, taking agent No. 2 to the lots, descanted on the "fine cellar." 'Fine be ----," exploded the real estate man, who was of the earth earthy, 'those lots ain't worth $150 each." And they are not.

So you see all is not gold that glitters even here. Still, California is a really wonderful state. It has a marvelous climate, and there is good fortune in store for those ready to tickle its magnificent soil. FREDERICK W. WIHTE.

HE WAS DISAPPOINTED. Mr. Elijah Smith, of McPherson, Kan., embodies the following in a letter to us: "About one week ago I visited my old home, Minneapolis, Kan., and was playing a few games of checker, with one of my friends; and just as we finished a stranger stepped into the room, so I went out to look after some business, and in a little while a friend came to see if I would play finished a stranger stepped into the room, so I went out to look after some business, and in a little while a friend came to see if I would play this stranger, as he wanted to play for $10 per game, but would not play except for money, and that they would do the betting if I would play him, so we played about fifteen or sixteer games. I won four, he won four; balance drawn. He told me next day his name was John Armour, of Kankakee, III. Do you know such a party? I was a little disappointed, as I expected a party wanting to bet on checkers with strangers would do me up, and I think he expected an easy walkaway, and was also disappointed. He said he had played you and had beat Prof. Fitzpatrick in St. Louis. I doubted that, however." In 1883 the editor of the solumn received a severo beating from Mr. Armour, but in 1885 made a special trip to Kankakee and engaged in a contest which lasted five hours. At the close the editor had the gratification of knowing that his visit was a success. Mr. Armour did at one time defeat the Professor. success. Mr. . the Professor.

SCHWATKA IN MEXICO.

A Giance at Some Interesting Ruins in Northern Chihuahua.

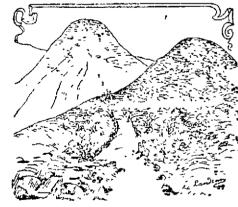

A Day Spent with the Revies of a People of Long Ago-Rich Silver Mines and Mexican Methods of Mining-Big Fortunes Awaiting Americans Who Will Use Their Brains and Skill to Dig Them Out-Crossing the Casas Grandes.

[Convricted, 1889.]

INTER FORD, NORTH OF NORTH AND AND ASSET One of the interesting pecularities of the numerous rums in Northwestern Chinaahua, that indicates a once dense population hying off the soil, is in the way that most of them seemed to have mettherr fate. When a ruined house is dug into, all the skeletons of its occupants are found in what might be termed the combined known and diningroom -for these two rooms were in oneand always near a sire-place. The postures of these skeletons are as various as it is possible for the human body to assume. They are found kneeling, stretched out, sometimes with their locked hands over their heads, on their sides, and again with their children in their arms, no two being alike, at least in the same house, or series of houses where they were united into a pueblo. Now in the whole study of sepulture it has been universally found, even among the lowest savages as well as the most civilized, whatever form of burial they adopt, no matter what may be the absurdity of it from our point of view, that it is always uniform in the main points, allowing, of course, some slight deviations for caste or rank. The position of these skeletons in their own houses controvert this theory and have led some to believe that they were destroyed there by a great earthquake or other vio entaction of nature. I had a long talk with Mr. Davis, superintendent of the Corralitos Company, who has made something of a study of these ancient ruins from having them almost forced on him, and he not only believes that they were destroyed by a violent earthquake, but that this cataciysm caught them at the evening meal. He infers this latter from a consideration of the customs of the present almost pure-blooded Indian race here, called Mexicans, that must have descended from the old race, but singularly Buough know nothing of their ancient proa set of rums about half way between his nacienda and Casas Grandes near Barranea. I visited it next day, and what I found, coupled with his own researches, is about nave been needed, especially so wall made; out experience has taught toe that when no other reasonable expand I alon be found for a doing, that superstitions or religious motives can then be readily introduced to tion, propably, with a wall about twenty have already more than hinted, all these valleys along the foot-hills of the Sierra

Madre mountains may have held a dense population when these anevent people sojourned here. If the physical characteristics were it e same as at the present time it is easy to account for To the westward it is too mountainous for many people to find homes and caltivate the soil, while to the eastward the empty is too barren after one passes the line of lakes or where the mount on rivers suck.

A view of this road as we saw it from the plain in the flat variety of the Casas Grandes is given in figure 1,, and the first small ruin on the first had is shown in figure 2. The circular runs higher up on the second hill and the fortification on the top are not shown, as they are really not visible from the low point where the sketch was taken by Mr. Landeau, our artist. From the fortification summit, the view, from a military stand-point, was one of the most complete that could be desired. From both sides the hills retreated giving full scope to the eveup and down the broad valley, every square yard of which was probably irrigated and cultivated, while just back of the fortification or to the eistward, the Escondido Mountains opened out into a titley that made any surprise by an enemy from that side impossible. In 8 ort, the fortification could be left defenseless by the people in clear weather, or during such weather as they would be likely to work on their farms, and with a few keen-sighted sentinels posted there they could give the alarm of a coming hostile memsion in ample time for the population to man the intrenchments before an attack could possibly be made by the most rapidly moving enemy.

bodied citizen of that day was equally an artisan or farmer and a soldier when an enciny approached, an assumption which we know is well founded with so many of the ancient races, although arms now is considered a definite profession. Returning from Davis Hill, an outlying but prominent foot-hill of the Escondido (Hidden) mountain, we passed through the old deserted Mexican mining town of Barranca.

the long rows of slag that had come from the adobe furnaces, part of which were still standing. The primitiveness of the work and the richness of the ore they smelted was shown by our driver who had had some experience in mining, and who picked up a small piece of slag almost pure lead and silver in probably the same proportion it had existed in the volu. He made no hesitation in asserting that, with new improved machinery such as that employed in the mining districts of the United States and with a railroad running near by, all the immense slag piles, the refuse of probably lifty years of Mexican mining, could be worked over with a decided profit to the people handling it. There are probably a dozen great fortunes lying dormant in the different slag-piles of the old mines of Northwestern Chihuahua alone. And yet these people still persist in working in this way with improved machinery ail around them. While we were at the little Mexican town of La Ascension we saw about a dozen natives working by this method which is as old as that mentioned in the Bible. The rich ore, showing probably $250 to the ton, had been pried out of the vein with crowbars and rough blasting and then brought to the town on the backs of burros. Here the huge rocks were broken at first with sledge hammers until they were reduced to a size about as big as one's fist, so that they could be hardled and broken by smaller hand hammers until it was almost as fine as sand. It was reduced to a complete powder by being beaten in coarse leathern bags. It was then taken and mixed with water and thrown into an arasbra, which is a cross between a coffee mill and qui a crusher; in short, it is four stones tied to a revolving mill-bar drawn by the inevitable mule of Mexico.

This makes a paste rich in granulated silver which is mixed with sait and boiled in a little pot as if they were making applebutter, or putting up the preserves for a family's winter use, instead of working one of the richest veins of silver in a country celebrated for its valuable silver mines This resulting mass is washed out in a panlike a prospective moner washes for signs of gold in the sand and gravel of a mountain stream, with the exception that quicksilver is put in to form an am ugum with the now liberated silver. This is pressed out with the hand and the little ball of analyam, as bright as silver itself, has the mercury driven off by a furnace big enough to fry the eggs for a party of two, and the pure silver bail, glistea ug like hear frost in the morning sun, is be nen down to the size of a big marble to prevent it, in its very friable condition, from been sing to pieces. It is exasperating in the extreme to see such diabolical works of man applied to the rich offerings of nature. In my first two hundred mues of travel I passed naif as many silver 'prospects" that would pay well if a railroad ran within a day's easy haul of them, that are now idle, and that will remain so until Angio-Saxon blood, muscle and machinery get into these parts to change the present sluggish course of affairs.

The most exaggerated reports are the most likely to come from the worst parts of and delight in respecting it. mine he has a dozen incentives for keeping accompanies him everywhere. That it quiet to where he has one in publishing it to the world. Nor does the Mexican Gov ernment publish such an array of statistics as we are accustomed to give every decade on mining as well as other matters. As a consequence, the richest silver mines of the world, as well as those of some of the other precious metals, are hidden away in the wilds of the norther n part of Mexico, and the great reading world knows less about them than they do of many thousands of other enterprises of not one-tenth the importance. This would be almost impossible in the United States, and hard to comprehend in that country, but as easy as the proverbial rolling off a log in Mexico.

My trip of over two hundred miles down the eastern slope of the Sierra Madre mountains, from the boundary between the two countries, coupled with the information I had gained en route, showed me that I could undoubtedly do better by attempting to make my way through the great range from the wes ward, so the remainder of this article details our change of base from the State of Chinnahua to that of Sonora to the westward, preparatory to piercing the Sierra Madres at the most available line for the best interests of the expedition. There was but very little out of routine travel for a day or two, until we came to the third crossing of the Cassas Grandes river, at a noint so he ir its mouth or where it emptied into Laguna Guzman, that we felt sure we would have little trouble in crossing it, for as I have already explained, most of the civers of this country are the larger the nearer they get to their heads. There had been no rans to swell the streams, and our surprise can therefore be imagined when we reached the river to find it a raging torrent. It was over the backs of our smallest horses and over the tops of all the wagon hads, so the prospect was not very encouraging for a crossing with our effects in a dry condition.

A long experience in frontier field service had taug'it me that it was seldom wise to await the falling of a swollen river if it could be crossed at all, and so we set to work to get over the obstreperous stream.

The loads on the wagors were piled high above the beds, and this made them top heavy, the great empty beds acting like so many boats as they dashed into the river, contributing very much to making the whole thing unstable. One driver, a Mexican by the name of Chaves, had the worst time of it in a low, light wagon drawn by two small punto bronchos. The flood swept him down stream under an overhanging clump of willows despite a rope tied to the tongue of the wagon and another behind held firmly by a half down persons on the upstream side. But he was as cool at the head as at his feet, although he was knee deep in the ice-water of the river as bo stood upright in the wagon bed. A moment's waiting to allow the horses to regain their bewildered senses and Chaves swam them upstream to the crossing, and the men with a who ip and yell dragged the whole affair on shore, looking like drowned rats tied to a dripping eigar box. We were three hours and a quarter getting over the river, which was finished just at night fall, but we felt as if we could have lyuched the man who wrote that Mexico was a vast waterless tract of country. We saw enough water that day to have supplied Bourbon County, Kentucky, for a full century. A good system of conserving the water supply here would allow thirty Cancasains to tic and it never helped it a bit.—Bob live off of the soil to where one Mexican is Burdette FREDERICH SCHWATKA.

THE HON, HENRY W. GRADY.

ATLANTA, May 16.—The recent visit of Hon. Henry W. Grady to the New York centennial proved that the star of his northern popularity had not lost any of its luster. The newspapers, without exception, also agree that his speech before he Southern society sustains his reputation for brilliant oratory, rivated, as yet, by no other southerner.

The term brilliant as applied to Grady s expressive—it fits the man exactly. In everything he undertakes there is a snap, a glowing audacity which other public men may possess, but which is too frequently unaccompanied by successful achievement

Mr. Grady's office is on the third floor of The Constitution building. He is very accessible and wholly without the usual trappings of a great man. One is invariably struck with the bareness, almost carelessness, of the apartment. It adjoins that of Mr. Harris ("Uncle Remus"), was, it need scarcely be remarked, is little more of an aesthete than his chief. In the center is a long deal table, generally used to recome upon, as there are no chairs to be seen. Posted upon the somewhat severe looking walls are a couple of colored chromos, remarkable, if nothing else, for their extreme inappropriateness. One of them represents, in all the colors at the lithographer's command, a British naval veteran gazing soulfully at his beloved Union Jack, eated over a patriotic scroll and legend. The other is a l'arisian architectural design. There are no books or even papers

Before one of the windows stands a person of medium height and somewhat robust build. He has straight, shiny black hair, piercing black eyes of the same shade and a swarthy skin. The visitor has plenty of time to study his surroundings, as the gentleman at the window takes no notice of his entrance wherever. After a lapse of some ten or treen minutes he slowly turns around and commences to pace up and down the floor with his hands thrust into his pockets. Suddenly he stops and turns on the stranger a cold inquiring stare, and the query, "What can I do for you?" at the same time pointing him to a seat on the table. He pulls out a spittoon for your benefit, and in a few moments you are chatting amiably with the editor of The Atlanta Constitution, a man who wields more power and influence, both as an editor and as a citizen, than any ten other men in Georgia combined.

Grady's literary method is unique, in fact, I think it would be beyond most men. He goes to the window, stares at a brick house or a cotton compress for an hour or two, puts his main ideas in shape, adjusts each sentence, and even syllable, in its proper order, mentally, and then rattles the whole thing of to his stenographer, rarely committing a single error. While under the influence of an idea which he is putting through the literary process he is utterly oblivious to his surroundings. Sometimes the fit strikes him under peculiar circumstances. but the people of Atlanta are rather proud of this weakness than otherwise,

Mr. Grady's secretary, Mr. Halliday. now famous editorial which completely changed the attitude of The Constitution upon the tariff question was dictated upon the steps of a Whitehall street car which he had unconsciously signaled. It is jokingly related that the car was full at the time and that one of the passengers who dared to murmur at the stoppage was threatened with bodily injury if he opened his mouth. It is told of Senator Edmunds, of Vermont, apropos of his recent visit to Atlanta, that a crowd had gathered on one of the principal thoroughfares, and traffic was temporarily blockaded. The sad eyed senator asked his colored driver what the matter was.

"I 'spects it's Mistah Grady, sah! He got one o' his thinkin' spells ag'in!" he said as he turned the hors heads into an adjoining street. This is only a sample of the stories told at Grady's expense.

The success of the Piedmont exposition, the Georgia Chautauqua and numer ous other enterprises is pepularly credited to his personal efforts. His latest achievement well illustrates both Grady's character and influence.

For some months past a movement has been directed at New York to obtain subscriptions by public benefit and otherwise for the erection of an asylum for the Confederate veterans residing in the state of Texas. Many noted men lent their names, including that old Union war horse, Gen. Sherman; but the fund lagged slowly, even pitifully, along; Maj. Stewart, the agent of the enterprise, sent appeal after appeal, but still only a few hundred dollars lay in the treasury. Grady watched it from afar and chafed under what he thought was a deep humiliation.

Finally be could stand it no longer, and late one night dashed off an editorial, "the finest he ever wrote," said Mr. Wallace P. Reed, the southern story writer, as he told me the incident. Its force and pathos were wonderful. "Come home, Maj. 'Joe' Stewart," he said; 'come home, and let our scarred old veterans relapse into the honorable obscurity from which they should never have been dragged!" It was then proposed that Georgians build a home for then bandful of gray warriors, fast thinning out, to live but a few years more except in the hearts of the people. The ink wascarcely dry when the money began to pile up in the office of the newspaper In a fortnight, among the very humblest classes, nearly $50,000 had been raised The home will be located near Atlanta. and the work is already in progress. Here is an ancient rum built of stone and looking very much like a position of defense. At the base of both hids is a series of mounds extending as far as the eye can reach, and I almost feel afraid to place an estimate on the number I saw. More than that, I am afraid to say whether the mounds really represent buildings at all. In all other mounds there is sign of the house-walls protruding through the debris, but here there is none; yet they closely resemble the other mounds in all other respects. Every thing goes to show that these people were on the defensive.

and that defense was often necessary. These ruins look very much older than any others that I have visited here, but much of it can be accounted for. I taink, by the sandy character of the district. Nothing nakes any abandoned bunding or other work of man look so very antiquated as frifting sand piling up around it. This town, therefore, may have been contemporaneous with the ruined towns of the Casas Grandes vailey generally, although the latter look much more recent from being built on more compact soil. As I

hal, on East Premont street, on Saturday afternoon. The meeting was very poorly arended, there being but about two handred men present. The assemblage was called to order by Mr. Alex Johnson, of Ne son oil , the vice president of the Na ional Progressive Union for t satisfact. Mr. J. P. Jones, of North Lawrence, the president of subdistrict No. 5, was nonmated and elected as chai man of the meeting. He stated the of jet fithe convention, and by a lew pleasant remarks introduced the rion, John McBride, of Massilion, the national president of the N. P. U. Mr. McBri te made his remarks very brief. He said he was disappointed in finding such a few present, and although he had come with the intertion of making a speech, he did not feel so inclined in the face of the apparent indifference evinced by the miners there. He said that he had many things of interest, which he would like to communicate to the miners of the district. The needs of the hour demanded that all should be informed on these subjects, but he did nor wish to talk to such a mere handful of men as were gathered there. He wasted to see all the men in this Vicinity, together, in one tinge mass convention. He wis led to address them all in a hore and would like to explain to them all the methods, the objects, aims, in I needs of the National Progressive Union. He stated that the existing traples in many parts of the mining so, d made it necesarry for all the men to be conversant with the mining affaire of different sections, and also, that to ey be prepared for any exigency He constituted by suggesting that a resolution be assed, appointing a day and place, which would be suitable, and that all the miners come out and have a real good, old-fashioned mass meeting.

Next the district president, Mr. Christopher Evans, or New Straitsville, Onic. was introduced to the audience. He made the longest speech of the day, and his remarks were clear, pointed and forcible. He spoke of the complicated nature of a divine affairs at the present time and the ghis toat the outlook was some what is mous for the furnie. He spoke of the as atisfaction with president Mo-Bride and the N. P. U. officials, owing to the action taken in advising the Beceptance of the late reduction. He said that it was necessuated by the state of mining afflurs. If Indiana and Illiniois had stood firm on the old scare, Ohio would have remained the same. The action was forced, nothing else con'd be done, and we had better submit to a slight reduction than to begin a strike which could only result in a defeat for the miners. Mr. Evans reviewed the the disintegration which had taken place among the different states, and argued that we have been left in such a condition that we have to consider the needs of our state alone and do the best we can for ourselves under the circumstances. Mr. Evins enlarged upon his subject, considered it from all sides, and produced conclusive, convincing and exhanstive arguments. He said that it sometimes looked as if we were coming back to our old modes of warfare, but he did not want to see such times. However, if the greed of selfish capitalists forced them to make a stand for their rights, they should be organized and in a condition that they might maintain

After Mr. Evans had concluded, Mr. Alex. Johnson was called upon and made a few remarks, reporting a very successful delegate meeting which was held at Canal Fulton the previous Wednesday.

Next Mr. T. O'Malley, of Canton, was called for, and spoke a few happy words, putting every one in a good humor.

When he had closed, a motion was made and carried that a general mass meeting be held at some time in the near future, the time and place to be decided by the district officials. The convention then adjourned, with general good feeling existing all around, an evident determination on the high, from sixteen to twenty feet wide, part of all present to make the next one and continues so to the face of the main more successful in point of numbers.

Up in British Columbia the Mineral Act requires miners to pay a license, and the miners of Kootenay district petitioned the Legislative Assembly to repeal the section bearing on this, but that body did not pay any attention to it. Moreover the following amendment to the Mineral Act has been pased: "Every person engaged in mining for minerals other than coal shall take out a free miners' certificate, and any person who mines or works for wages as a miner in any mining claim, or on any bedrock flume, bedrock drain or ditch, without having taken out and obtained such license, shall, on conviction thereof to teit and pay a penal y not exceeding t venty five d have b sides costs "-Coal Trade Journal

The Cleveland correspondent to the Coal Trade Journal writes: "After a struggle of five weeks' duration the inborers on the coal docks have resumed work, and more active shipments of coal may be expected from this neighborhood. All of the Ohio ports are now in shape to go on with work, and there is every reason to believe that there will be no trouble from railway service and that on the whole the shipments of the season may compare favorably with a year ago. The settlement between the coal handlers and the shippers was brought about through a fair statement of the situation both sides made to a commission appointed by the board of trade. After a general understanding the men, who asked for 14 cents a ton and were offered 12 cents, agreed to compromise at 13 cents. Fully a thousand cars of coal are on dock here and it will now be moved very fast."

Discovering Coal Eight Feet Thick, and Plenty of People Who Want The Independent.

MR EDITOR: - Last Monday morning I made a flying visit to Canton, then down events of the bast few years, spoke of on the book and Hady branch, to the ones of the Osnaburg Mining Company Here I found Mr. Z. Poll superintendent, and Mr. John Ziber, boss of those mines. Mr. Doll gave me a cordial welcome, and gave me considerable information in regard to the mines of this locality. This company has three openings of which all are drifts. They employ about fifty or sixty men, but owing to the dullness of trade and other circumstances, we only secured twelve subscribers. Mr. Doll bas my thanks for favors shown me while at this place and I hope to do bet ter on my next visit.

On Wednesday I went to Canal Fulton and reported the proceedings of the convention of the suo district 3, which appeared in your last issue.

Then again on Thursday, I left Mas. sillon for Mineral Point, in Tuscarawas county. The first mine visited at this place was the Superior, better known as the Strawboard mine. Here I made the acquaintance of Mr. T. Smith, the superintendent, who said after hearing the object of my visit, that I could canvass all I wanted to inside and out. I might say that all the mines here are drifts, and this one, the Superior, is the best laid out that your representative ever saw, and be has seen a great many in his time. I hope I may be pardoned for making special mention of this one. It is, I should think, about seven feet entry, more than a half-mile under the hill, and if the trap doors were left open you could see the tipple on the outside. In my circuit through the mine, (or I should say partially through, for they quit at noon on the day of my visit,) I secured nineteen subscribers to THE IN

I next visited the Davis mine, operated by the Markley Coal Company, of Mineral Point. Here about eighteen men are employed, from whom I secured twelve subscriptions

Mr. George Hann, of this city, will the mine but he only employs about He willingly consented to my canvassing of seeing the thickest coal it has been my lot to see in Ohio. The men we visited in this mine were working on coal eight feet thick, while at the other mines the coal runs from three to four feet thick, and this appears to be the trouble at all those mines. Sixty-two and one-half cents is the price whether you have thick or low coal. This should not be so; there should be a scale of prices at such places, so that the miners

This company has started to sink an air shaft, which is needed very badly, but if nothing wrong occars it will be down in a operators in their increase of shipments shore time. The average for each man per day for the pay just ended was two and one-half tons, or $1.81 a day, but after deducting all expenses it reduces the wages to the small sum of about $1.40; and yet the employers say that miners' wages must be reduced, as they cannot afford to run their mines without making a little money. We, however, have a good company to deal with, and by acting as men to them they will treat us as such. I say to the miners of this district who heard the words of John McBride on Saturday last, to keep wide awake, be prepared to stand against any reduction, and at the next mass meeting try and have a larger gathering than at the last one; hold meetings, and try and have every miner present to hear John, Christ and Aiex. How He Trains Daily at Muldoon's Farm in Belfast, N. Y.-As a Milker "Sully" is a Flat Failure-A Force of Trained Rubbers Have the Big Champion in Charge-To Leave for the Battle Field Early in July.

BELFAST, N. Y., May 21.—Pugilist John Lawrence Sullivan is getting in fine form for his coming mill with Jake Kilrain. He means business, and since his arrival at Belfast last Friday has left liquor and tobacco severely alone. When seen yesterday he looked like a four-time winner. There was a bright lustre in his eyes and a healthy glow on his checks.

"This will be the fight of my life," he said, "and I am going to win it or my name isn't Sullivan.

His trainer, William Muldoon, is perfectly happy in the belief that Sullivan will win the big fight in a canter at New Orleans next July,

"When I lett New York with Sullivan," said Muldoon to an intimate triend, "I had orders to put him in trim in ten days. If I found that he was not in condition in that time, I was to telegraph Johnston, who would then forfeit the big stake of $10,000. Johnston was determined not to let Sullivan go into the ring unless he was in condition to win, and, rather than see any fizzle in the ring, was willing to lose his stakes and let the fight go by default.

Muldoon sent a long telegram to Backer Johnston, informing him that Sullivan was training into magnificent form, and that he was certain he would be in condition to win. The fight will now surely take place, and it will be for blood.

After a light breakfast Sullivan slips into three heavy woolen shirts, three sets of drawers, encases his feet in heavy stockings, puts on thick shoes ballasted with five pounds of lead, covers his hands with telt-lined mittens, and drawing a coarse cap over his forehead starts out for his daily constitutional. This is a walk over hills and through valleys and forests to Birdsall thirteen miles away. He usually starts at 10 a. m. and returns at 4 p. m. His trainer turns up his shoes when he returns and pours about a pint of water from each. Then he takes a brace of invigorating baths and rests an hour. After that he goes into the barn, which has a padded floor, and amuses himself pasting a sand bag. He takes to training like a duck to water, and Muldoon expects to make him as a wrestler second only to himself. The training is to be kept up until July 6, when the party will leave for Rochester and embark in a special car for the south. Cleary and Muldoon's brother and a force of trained rubbers have the champion in charge. Muldoon is of the opinion that over $500,000 will be staked on the fight, and he wants as much of it as he can get to place on Sullivan, Sullivan's arm does not trouble him a bit. He expects to train down to 195 or 200 pounds.

SCRANTON, Pa., May 21.—Shortly after 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon a destructive cyclone passed over the northwestern section of Lackawanna county. The greatest fury of the storm was about midway between the villages of Clark's Green and Clark's Summit, where the farm house of Simon Montgomery and several barns were blown to pieces.
